NEW ARRIVALS IN THE BOOKSTORE include:

Biblical Studies

- Lloyd R. Bailey, The Pentateuch, Interpreting Biblical Texts (Abingdon)--a Duke Divinity School professor offers an introduction, dealing with the concept of Torah, literary forms, theories of authorship, and then guides the reader in interpreting the various levels of meaning and the relevance of the text today.
- Robert P. Carroll, From Chaos to Covenant: Prophecy in the Book of Jeremiah (Crossroad)--in the first major introduction to Jeremiah since 1922, this Glasgow scholar proposes that the book is the product of a community rather than the historical Jeremiah.
- Joseph A. Alexander, Isaiah (Klock & Klock)--reprint of a classic commentary by a nineteenth-century scholar.
- Lucie Lamy, Egyptian Mysteries (Crossroad)--a fully illustrated introduction to ancient Egyptian beliefs.
- Joan Comay, The Diaspora Story: The Epic of the Jewish People among the Nations (Random)--a scholarly and colorfully illustrated account of the fluctuation of Jewish fortunes in the last nineteen centuries.
- Leonhard Goppelt, Theology of the New Testament, Vol. 1: The Ministry of Jesus in Its Theological Significance (Eerdmans)--a welcome translation of this major work by the late professor at the University of Munich, which presents a significant conservative alternative to Bultmann, while maintaining a synthesis of biblical and systematic theology.
- Robert H. Stein, An Introduction to the Parables of Jesus (Westminster)--a Fuller graduate who is now Professor of NT at Bethel Theological Seminary offers a clear introduction to interpreting the parables, useful both for college and seminary students and church study groups.
- Paperback reprints of three more commentaries in the New Century Bible series:
Matthew Black, Romans
Donald Guthrie, Galatians
C. Leslie Mitton, Ephesians
- Leander E. Keck, A Future for the Historical Jesus (Fortress)--paperback reprint of this positive contribution to the controversy concerning the historical Jesus.
- F. F. Bruce, An Expanded Paraphrase of the Epistles of Paul (Haynes)--a reprint of Professor Bruce's helpful interpretative paraphrase, which is enhanced in this edition by being printed alongside the text of the RV (1881).

Church History

- Margaret R. Miles, Fullness of Life: Historical Foundations for a New Asceticism (Westminster)--a Harvard Divinity School professor explores the development of Christian asceticism throughout the history of the church with the surprising conclusion that it has been based on a positive rather than negative view of the body.
- Ray C. Petry (ed.), A History of Christianity: Readings in the History of the Church, 2 vols. (Baker)--a reprint of a useful reader in Church History, originally published by Prentice-Hall.

Theology

- Langdon Gilkey, Society and the Sacred (Crossroad)--realizing that the relationship between religion and culture is as significant for modern society as it is for the analysis of ancient ones, the well-known American theologian develops a modern theology of culture.

- Jean Milet, God or Christ? The Excesses of Christocentricity (Crossroad)--using the method of social psychology, this French Catholic theologian sees the current crisis of faith in the church as due to a gradual shift in the history of the church from theocentricity toward christocentricity.
- Tom F. Driver, Christ in a Changing World: Toward an Ethical Christology (Crossroad)--the Paul Tillich Professor of Theology and Culture at Union (NY) Theological Seminary holds that "The main purpose of the church is not to remember Jesus. Its main purpose, surely, is to participate now, in present-future time, in the redemption of the world."
- David G. Truemper and Frederick A. Niedner, Jr., Keeping the Faith: A Guide to the Christian Message (Fortress)--a contemporary statement of basic Christian belief which tries to avoid the trappings of professional theology in order to be comprehensible to the amateur.
- Martin Israel, Smouldering Fire: The Work of the Holy Spirit (Crossroad)--a theology of the Holy Spirit, concentrating on the psychological and psychical aspects of the Spirit's work.
- Edward Schillebeeckx, Jesus: An Experiment in Christology (Random)--a paperback reprint of this Dutch Catholic theologian's massive work.
- Hans Kung, Does God Exist? An Answer for Today (Random)--a paperback reprint of Kung's comprehensive statement of why a "yes" to God remains a more reasonable and responsible belief than its alternative, nihilism.

Philosophy

- Howard Gardner, The Quest for Mind: Piaget, Levi-Strauss, and the Structuralist Movement (University of Chicago)--this second edition updates recent developments in structuralism generally, in the work of Levi-Strauss and Piaget, and in the further extension of the movement in the work of Noam Chomsky.
- Jacques Derrida, Dissemination (University of Chicago)--the latest work of the well-known French philosopher involved in linguistic philosophy and hermeneutics.
- W. V. Quine and J. S. Ullian, The Web of Belief (Random)--two well-known American philosophers offer an introduction to the study of rational belief.
- W. H. Newton-Smith, The Rationality of Science (Routledge)--an Oxford Fellow proposes a temperate rationalism as an approach to the philosophy of science between the extremes of the rationalism of Popper and Lakatos and the non-rationalism of Kuhn and Feyerabend.
- Stillman Drake, Cause, Experiment and Science (University of Chicago)--a new translation of Galileo's epoch-making book, Bodies That Stay atop Water, or Move in It, in the format of a dialogue with two of Galileo's contemporaries.
- Hazel E. Barnes, Sartre and Flaubert (University of Chicago)--the first full-length treatment of Sartre's masterly three-volume study of Flaubert (which is now appearing for the first time in English).
- C. A. Wringe, Children's Rights: A Philosophical Study (Routledge)--a detailed account of the children's rights movement with an analysis of the concept of a right and its justification.
- Loren R. Graham, Between Science and Values (Columbia)--surveying the "expansionist" and "restrictionist" approaches to the relationship between science and human values, an MIT professor concludes that a modified expansionism is the superior approach.

Women

- Christine Downing, The Goddess: Mythological Images of the Feminine (Crossroad)--a scholarly yet personal journey that shows how the great female figures of archaic and classical Greece can serve to illuminate the present and future of women everywhere.

James B. Hurley, Man and Woman in Biblical Perspective (Zondervan)--in a revised version of a Cambridge dissertation, the author, who now teaches at Westminster Theological Seminary, surveys the biblical evidence from the Old to the New Testament concerning women and their role in church and society.

Sociology

Thomas Kochman, Black and White Styles in Conflict (University of Chicago)--shows how differences in communicative style lead to conflict and misunderstanding in quite ordinary interracial encounters.

Comparative Religions and Missions

Mircea Eliade, Tales of the Sacred and the Supernatural (Westminster)--two Romanian folk tales which deal with sickness and health, time and eternity, life and death.

Edward Fischer, Fiji Revisited: A Columban Father's Memories of Twenty-Eight Years in the Islands (Crossroad)--an account of the life and experiences of Father Martin Dobey.

Henry Warner Bowden, American Indians and Christian Missions: Studies in Cultural Conflict (University of Chicago)--the author, a professor of religion at Rutgers, asserts that "The fact that missions were a general failure anyway makes it even more important to investigate the complicated nature of religious dialogue."

John Dykstra Eusden, Zen and Christian: The Journey Between (Crossroad)--the author, both a Congregational minister and a member of a Zen Buddhist temple, explores the relationships of similarity and difference between Zen and Christianity.

Paul Hunt, Inside Iran (Haynes)--the chaplain to the Bishop of Iran recounts not only what happened, but why it happened, from his own first-hand experience.

Ministry

Dick Murray, Strengthening the Adult Sunday School Class, Creative Leadership Series (Abingdon)--provides a comprehensive program for strengthening this beleaguered institution and helping adults in the church on their personal spiritual pilgrimages.

Arlene J. Ban, Children's Time in Worship (Judson)--practical and interesting ideas for encouraging children to share directly in worship rather than being mere observers of an adult-centered service.

Spirituality

C. S. Lewis, Mere Christianity (Macmillan)--a new gift edition of this Lewis classic.

Chad Walsh (ed.), C. S. Lewis: The Visionary Christian (Macmillan)--131 readings from Lewis's fiction and poetry.

Sherwood Eliot Wirt, Not Me God (Haynes)--an imaginary conversation between an overwrought business man and God.

Bruce Wilson, The Human Journey (Haynes)--an influential Australian pastor shows how true freedom is not rebellion or randomness but "the ability to choose between reality and unreality, and the knowledge to know the difference."

Psychology and Counseling

Laurence D. Steinberg, The Life Cycle: Readings in Human Development (Columbia)--an anthology of major contributions to life-span development, including the works of Ainsworth, Elkind, Erikson, Hartup and Hetherington.

J. Roland Fleck and John D. Carter (ed.), Psychology and Christianity: Integrative Readings (Abingdon)--after defining the term "integration" the essays deal with models of integration, Christian and psychological maturity, religious understanding and thought, counseling and therapy, human sexuality, Christianity and psychological theories, and popular Christian psychologies.

Joseph H. Fichter, Religion and Pain: The Spiritual Dimension of Health Care (Crossroad)--focuses on hospital and health-care personnel who believe that a religious perspective is essential for a holistic approach to health.

Donald Capps, Biblical Approaches to Pastoral Counseling (Westminster)--shows how the methods and objectives of counseling can be defined and shaped by three biblical forms: psalms, proverbs, and parables.

Alastair V. Campbell, Rediscovering Pastoral Care (Westminster)--reintroduces the Christian images of the shepherd's courageous leadership, the power of the wounded healer, and the wisdom of the fool for regaining the integrity of pastoral care.

Hazel Goddard, Can I Hope Again? (Haynes)--the experiences of people in deep anxiety and depression and how they were brought to wholeness.

Marriage and Family

Patricia H. Berne and Louis M. Savary, Building Self-Esteem in Children (Continuum)--grounded on sound psychology but presented simply and directly, this positive book will be used and appreciated by all adults concerned with the emotional and spiritual well-being of children in their care.
